- 4 – The methodology for calculating the structural balance shall be that defined within the scope of and in accordance with the Stability and Growth Pact.
- 5 – Whenever the ratio of public debt to GDP at market prices is significantly below sixty per cent and the risks for the long-term sustainability of the public finances are low, the limit for the medium-term objective may attain a structural deficit of at most one per cent of GDP.
- 6 – For as long as the medium-term objective is not achieved, the annual adjustment in the structural balance may not be less than zero point five per cent of GDP, and the rate of growth in public spending, net of extraordinary, temporary and discretionary measures on the revenue side of the equation, may not be greater than the medium-term reference rate for potential GDP growth, as defined in the Stability and Growth Pact.

4 – The provisions of subparagraph (b) of the previous paragraph shall not be considered for the purposes of determining the existence of a significant divergence if, taking the possibility of significant extraordinary revenues into account, the medium-term objective has been exceeded, and if the budget plans set out in the Stability Programme do not endanger that objective over the course of the Programme's lifetime.

5 – It shall be possible for a divergence not to be considered significant in cases in which it results from an occurrence that is exceptional, cannot be controlled by the Government under the terms provided for in Article 24 and has a significant impact on the public finances, and in cases of structural reforms that have long-term effects on economic activity, on condition that this does not endanger medium-term budgetary sustainability.

6 – The existence of a significant divergence may be recognised at the initiative of the Government, following prior consultation of the Public Finance Council, or at that of the Council of the European Union, by means of the submission of a recommendation addressed to the Government in accordance with Article 6(2) of Council Regulation (EC) no. 1466/97 of 7 July 1997.
