

COMMITTEE ON CULTURE, COMMUNICATION, YOUTH AND SPORT

Competences

In the performance of its duties, the Committee on Culture, Communication, Youth and Sport is responsible for exercising its competences of monitoring and performing political supervision in the areas of culture, media, the information society, associations, youth and sport.

Therefore, the Committee's responsibilities are as follows:

Within the scope of culture:

- Dealing with, in particular, matters relating to language, heritage, the arts, the creative and cultural industries, copyright and related rights (in matters that relate to cultural creators, artists and performers and the creative and cultural industries).

Within the scope of communication:

- Dealing with policies regarding the media, including matters related to public and private media bodies, public service radio and television, digital terrestrial television and next generation broadband;
- Dealing with policies concerned with information and communication technologies, the single digital market, without prejudice to cooperation with the Committee on Economics, Innovation and Public Works, the information society and new channels of communication such as social networks and blogs;
- Dealing with matters linked to copyright regarding the information society and the media, without affecting the need to work with the Committee on Education and Science with regard to scientific creation.

Within the scope of youth:

- Dealing with youth policies, particularly with regard to volunteer work, health and sexuality, leisure activities, education, employment and entrepreneurship, and housing, without prejudice to the specific competences of the remaining parliamentary committees, particularly with regard to education, health and sexuality, employment, and housing.

Within the scope of sport:

- Dealing with policies in the area of sport, particularly with regard to programmes for ethics, violence, spreading the practice of sport, sport at school and federations in sport, including the Olympics and Paralympics processes, high performance sport and monitoring the situation of the national sport movement.

Within the scope of associations, civic education and citizenship:

- Dealing with policies related to associations, civic education and citizenship within the scope of the Committee's areas.
